BUENOS AYRES.

The Gaceta of Monday last was not published till Tuesday, owing to its containing three times the ordinary quantity of matter, in an appendage of two additional sheets of impression. A considerable portion of its contents is comprised of addresses of felicitation to H.E. Governor Rosas, on the conclusion of peace with France, and on the late defeat of Lavalle, of despatches relating to military operations subsequent to the descent of the latter upon the coast of the Paraná, of letters and documents in reference to the victory of Quebracho Herrado, &c. All the transactions now officially reported, we were enabled to notice in a succinct but sufficiently explicit manner at the time, which relieves us at present from the task of compilation, and places us under the obligation of returning thanks to our informants for the now approved general correctness of the early intelligence with which we were favored.

The following letter from an officer in the army has been handed to us by a friend. It contains some interesting particulars.

" Villa de los Ranchos, Dec. 12, 1840.

" My esteemed friend—You will long before this have learnt the mortal blow we dealt to the miscreant unitarians, the enemies of the peace of two Republics, and the apostates from the cause of America in general, on the field of Quebracho Herrado, the 28th ultimo. The conduct of our gallant men is beyond all praise, and our Commander in-Chief, President Oribe, his second in command, General Pacheco, and, indeed, all our chiefs and officers have covered themselves with immortal glory. We commenced our march from Coronda on the 25th ult., at half past 4 in the afternoon, traversing a desert which did not afford us even a single drop of water to allay our parching thirst. On the 28th we came up with the enemy, about 4000 in number, at Los Quebrachitos, 36 leagues from Coronda, and here the battle took place, our army being formed in three divisions with their corresponding reserves, the left commanded by General Pacheco, the centre by Col. Costa, and the right by Col. Lagos. The action began at half past 11, and at 2 became general—at 5 the enemy's cavalry was in complete dispersion, and the infantry surrendered at discretion. Lavalle left the field with about 800 men, but being closely pursued this body likewise dispersed. The pursuit was continued for a great distance and immense slaughter made. The result of the victory is 1500 men of the enemy killed, among the rest Col. Baltar, Toribio Varela, Captain Uriarte, Rufino Varela, &c. &c. &c.; 700 prisoners, including the officers and civilians mentioned in the accompanying list, 2 colours, 6 pieces of artillery, and a great quantity of arms, 75 carts, 5 carriages, a multitude of families, a considerable number of horses, all the baggage, correspondence, &c., captured. Our loss, including 40 men who died from thirst, does not exceed 130 men.

" La Madrid was at a short distance from this place when the action was fought, and here he was joined by Lavalle; but on our approach they precipitately retreated to Cordova. The head-quarters of the army is at present here (8 leagues from Cordova), as likewise the Argentine and French Commissioners General Mancilla and M. Halay. The latter had an interview with Lavalle, who requested some time to reply to the propositions offered him. We are waiting for the answer, which is not expected to be satisfactory, in order to give the finishing stroke to the work we have commenced. All this quarter of Cordova has been restored to the legal authority of Governor Manuel Lopez, who is also with us. We have likewise been joined by Colonel Maza and his battalion, who could not come up in time to have a share in the action. Governor Juan Pablo Lopez was also prevented by ill health from having a part in it.

" La Madrid's force, insignificant as it was, has been completely demoralised by the defeat of Lavalle, his troops having nearly all deserted him. The only assistance he reckons upon, is Acha with 300 infantry and 150 cavalry, who was on his way to join him from Tucuman.

" The army has placed itself in communication with General Aldao and Governor Calderon of San Luis, so that were the remnants of the enemy ten times as strong as they are, they could not stand before us.

" I expect to write you again in a few days from the capital of Cordova.

Governor Ibarra of Santiago del Estero, in a letter to Governor Lopez of Santa Fé, under date 27th November, in answer to a communication from the latter announcing the conclusion of the differences with France, after expressing his hearty satisfaction at that "glorious and importani event," takes occasion to give some particulars relative to the late events in that quarter of the Republic. Santiago, he says, was invaded by the coalition of the North on the 27th of October, with a force of upwards of 2300 men, which entered at three different points; the right division consisting of 500 men from Catamarca commanded by Cano; the left composed of a like number of Saltenos led by Pereda, and the centre under the orders of the so-called Governor of Salta, Sola, forming a column of 1300 men. In the impossibility of fighting them en masse at their intended point of re-union, the capital, from the superiority of their arms, he resolved to attack them in detail, for which purpose he detached a division of 400 men under the command of his nephew Manuel Ibarra, which obtained a complete victory on the 5th November over the 500 Salteños headed by Pereda, on the banks of the Rio Salado. The Catamarca division was put to flight by a detachment of Choyanos, whilst the main body was severely harassed by guerrilla parties, to such a degree that Sola was obliged to retreat into the territory of Cordova with only 600 of the 1300 men he came with, the greater part of the rest having deserted from him, and surrendered their arms in different parts of Santiago. Governor Ibarra adds, that Sola entered the Province distributing proclamations in which he was profuse in his promises of guarantees, liberty, constitution, &c.; but the people schooled by a sad experience in the year 31, had learnt what importance to attach to such offers, and far from trusting to them, had fled into the forests. The proceedings of the invader, indeed, he says, gave the lie to their professions, for they carried their excesses and depredations to a most sacrilegious extent, despoiling the churches of their ornaments, robbing the sacred vessels, and performing all the wild freaks of Iconoclasts. "A pretty mode, remarks Governor Ibarra, of constituting the country! Dear liberty this for the poor Santiagueños!"

The two colours taken at the battle of Quebracho Herrado arrived in town on Sunday last, as likewise the device worn round the hat by Lavalle. One of the colours is dark blue and white, made of coarse buntine; the other is sky-blue and white, made of fine silk with a beautifully embroidered sun on either side, and is reported to have been known in Montevideo by the name of Bandera de Mayo. The device is broad and of the same colour and material as the last mentioned standard, and has the inscription—Ejercito de Valientes—embroidered with gold in the centre. Lavalle's coach and four other carriages captured at the battle of Quebracho Herrado, were brought into town on Thursday and deposited in the court-yard of the Fort.

Rosas.

A decree same date states that the victory at Quebrachito on 28th November 1840, tends to bring to a close the war brought on the country by the recreant traitor unitarians.

(See last page.)

A note dated 19th inst., from Colonel Cast Caceres (Inspector General acting) to Colonel Pedro Burgos, returns him thanks in the name of the government for the donation of the slave Miguel to serve in the army.

The Alameda and its vicinity were attended by a great number of ladies on Sunday evening last, notwithstanding the high wind and 'clouds of dust,' which rendered the promenade any thing but agreeable.

"TEN THOUSAND A YEAR."

The admirable tale under the above title is still continued in 'Blackwood's Magazine.' It has made a great impression on the public, and probably on that account the author has been induced to carry it on longer than he at first intended. We say so, because we think that the part in the number of October last rather flags. The tale commenced in the No. for October 1839, of 'Blackwood,' but we regret to say, our collection is incomplete, some persons having borrowed our Nos. for October and November 1839, and July 1840—and forgotten to return them, to the infinite inconvenience not only of ourselves but of others. We have advertised the missing books until we are tired of doing so, and have been therefore requested to insert the following hint.

"A certain lady of rank writes on the head or title page of all her books which are likely to be borrowed by her friends, "Stolen from Lady E. F. B." This has an extraordinary effect Contrary to all established custom, the books are returned as soon as read, it being obvious that to retain them would be to verify the foregoing mystic words."

We shall at all times feel pleasure in lending books on application to that effect. What more can we say.

ARGENTINE THEATRE.

On 19th inst., was performed for the benefit of Master Telemaco Gonzales, the drama of 'Don Quixote,' in which the beneficiado played the knight, and Felipe David his squire. The latter was irresistibly comic, especially in his soliloquy to Dapple. The horses (Rosinante included) behaved perfectly well.

The farce of Los Caldereros closed the entertainments of the evening.

The house was well attended.

On 20th, a play called El Duelo, the scene in France in the days of Cardinal Richilieu.—It related to an incensed and injured husband, who kills in a duel the man who had supplanted him in the effections of his beautiful wife.—The Cardinal too, notwithstanding the sanctity of his character, was smitten with the lady.

"Love levels all degrees."

In the farce Felipe David caused infinite amusement. He plays at this Theatre with all his wonted spirit. He is 'himself again.'

The audience was respectable. Several officers of the Danish frigate Bellona were in the boxes.

The Hon. Mrs. Norton.

A friend of ours in London, writes to us that this talented lady is as beautiful as ever, and that the portrait of her in the Mirador of the Commercial Room of Buenos Ayres, is a good likeness. Foreigners say that her face would be a perfect representation of a 'certain cast of beauty' were it not that her mouth is somewhat too large. She has lately published a work called The Dream and other Poems, which breathe the feelings which her portrait would lead one to suppose were paramount in her soul; particularly since the circumstanses which led to the separation from her husband, in which, as is generally believed, she was most grossly slandered. The dedication is to the Duchess of Sutherland, from which we give the following extracts.

"And unto Thee—the beautiful and pure—
Whose lot is cast amid that busy world
Where only sluggish Dulness dwells secure,
And Fancy's generous wing is faintly furl'd;
To thee—whose friendship kept its equal truth
Through the most dreary hour of my embitter'd youth—
I dedicate the lay. Ah! never bard,
In days when Poverty was twin with song;
Nor wandering harper, lonely and ill-starr'd,
Cheer'd by some castle's chief, and harbour'd long;
Not Scott's 'Last Minstrel,' in his trembling lays,
Woke with a warmer heart the earnest meed of praise!
For easy are the alms the rich man spares
To sons of Genius, by misfortune bent,
But thou gav'st me, what woman seldom dares,
Belief—in spite of many a cold dissent—
When, slandered and maligned, I stood apart,
From those whose bounded power hath wrung, not crushed, my heart.
Then, then, when cowards lied away my name,
And scoff'd to see me feebly stem the tide;
When some were kind on whom I had no claim,
And some forsook on whom my love relied,
And some, who might have battled for my sake,
Stood off in doubt to see what turn 'the world' would take—
Thou gavest me that the poor do give the poor,
Kind words, and holy wishes, and true tears;
The loved, the near of kin, could do no more,
Who changed not with the gloom of varying years,
But clung the closer when I stood forlorn,
And blunted Slander's dart with their indignant scorn."

A tribute to her mother does honour to the author's heart:—

"Oft, since that hour, in sadness I retrace
My childhood's vision of thy calm sweet face;
Oft see thy form, its mournful beauty shrouded
In thy black weeds, and coif of widow's wo;
Thy dark expressive eyes all dim and clouded
By that deep wretchedness the lonely know:
Stifling thy grief, to hear some weary task
Conn'd by unwilling lips, with listless air,
Hoarding thy means, lest future need might ask
More than the widow's pittance then could spare.
Hidden, forgotten by the great and gay,
Enduring sorrow, not by fits and starts,
But the long self-denial, day by day,
Alone amidst thy brood of careless hearts!
Striving to guide, to teach, or to restrain
The young rebellious spirits crowding round,
Who saw not, knew not, felt not for thy pain,
And could not comfort—yet had power to wound!
Ah! how my selfish heart, which since hath grown
Familiar with deep trials of its own,
With riper judgment looking to the past,
Regrets the careless days that flew so fast,
Stamps with remorse each wasted hour of time,
And darkens every folly into crime!"

Comic Latin Grammar.

WOMEN.—Women make their advances as Time makes his. At 20, when the swain approaches to pay his devoirs, they exclaim, with an air of languid indifference, "Who is he?" At 25, with a prudent look towards the ways and means, the question is, "What is he?" At 30, much anxiety manifests itself to make the hymenial selection, and the query changes itself into "Which is he?" But at the ultima thule of 40, the anxious expectant prepares to seize the prey, and exclaims, "Where is he?"

In writing about Poland, if an author is at a loss for surnames, all he has to do is to sneeze, and to add the syllable SKI afterwards. For instance in the various strange sounds of a sneeze:—Atishah-SKI; araposh-SKI; abidsph-SKI; stchar-SKI; tishoo-SKI; all excellent Polish names!

That the valiant Federal army, under the command of the Illustrious Brigadier General Manuel Oribe, legal President of the Oriental Republic of the Uruguay, and its second in command the worthy General Angel Pacheco, has covered itself with glory by annihilating the enemies of the Confederation.

That the splendid victory it has obtained will lead to the liberation of the oppressed Provinces and the re establishment amongst them of those ties of confraternity and peace, which have been interrupted by treason, for the purpose of delaying the national organisation, and by means of anarchy to commit spoliations on the people.

That the complete defeat of the recreant unitarian Lavalle and his miserable slaves, has frustrated the designs which the usurper in the Oriental Republic, had in view when he declared war against the Argentine Confederation. That in gratitude to the Federal army, the government of Buenos Ayres orders and decrees—

Here follows 14 articles specifying the rewards, &c., to the Commander in Chief, officers and soldiers engaged in the battle of Quebrachito. They are of the same nature as those awarded for the victory at Sauce Grande. The medal to be worn by General Oribe, is to be pendent from the neck by a riband of red and white, instead of red like the others. Want of room prevents our inserting the various inscriptions to be engraven on the medals. The sword for General Echague is to bear the words. On the exterior Viva la Confederacion Argentina! Ilustre Defensor de la libertad y honor de la Confederacion Argentina y del Continente Americano. On the interior Mueran los salvages unitarios! Sauce Grande, Julio 16, 1840. El Gobierno de la Confederacion Argentina, al patriotismo y al valor.

The medals for the battle at Quebrachito, have similar inscriptions—the words Quebrachito, Noviembre 28, 1840, being substituted for Sauce Grande.

A decree dated 1[illegible]th inst., states that the Convention of Peace celebrated with H.M. the King of the French, and the victories obtained over the recreant unitarian band, are events which prepare the solid bases of internal peace. The Government recognising therein the protection of Divine Providence, orders and decrees—

Art. 1. On a day to be hereafter named, High Mass and Te Deum shall be celebrated in the Cathedral Church, at which the Government and Civil and Military authorities shall attend.

2. The Clergy secular and regular shall assist at the Te Deum, during which a general peal shall be rung from the Churches commencing at the Cathedral.

3. Three salutes shall be fired during Divine Service.

4. On the day preceding the festival, the town shall be decorated with flags and illuminated in the evening. General peals shall be rung from all the Churches from 8 until 10.

5. On the day of the Church festival, the army shall be drawn up from the door of the Cathedral, Calle de la Federacion, and Road General Quiroga, to Santos Lugares de Rosas; those places to be decorated with flags.

6. Let this be published.
